The beat goes on . . .

After the long hot summer of '68, the school was again filled with the tempo of bustling students. The sights, sounds, and odors of the Panther's new school still lingered as students once more began the daily schedule.

Pioneer students were in the tempo with the variable world. Leather dresses, "Laugh Ins," sideburns, and bell-bottom pants were "the" things to do or wear. But school wasn't just a place for good times; there were always assignments of homework to do.

Not only did P.H.S. keep the rhythm of the 8:20 to 3:11 academic life, but other things were happening.

Traditions, realities, and aspirations compose overture of life at PHS

Organizations had their most active year at Pioneer. Clubs expanded not only in membership but also in success. The chorus had their second television appearance, and the band re-organized to form the "Marching 100."

Representatives of the North Central School Conference, a collection of schools of high academic excellence, came to Pioneer and evaluated our school.

Sports continued to play an important role as Pioneer athletes were successful in their endeavors.

All these activities represented life at Pioneer. A life that was always moving, but constantly changing.

Emptiness of summer is lost in beat of Complete silence reigned in the hollow corridors of Pioneer as the hands of the clocks beat away the seconds at an even tempo. The atmosphere tensed in expectation of a new school year. The silence was deafening and still the hands rotated. Around and around they went, their circular paths never ending. Not a sound reverberated anywhere and movements were absent everywhere. Nothing could be heard except the sounds of silence. Pioneer was asleep.

The bell rang. Spontaneously, footsteps emerged from everywhere at once and beat through the crowded halls. People were scurrying from place to place, each one searching through bits and pieces to find his real self. As time is infinite, so Pioneer shall always know a continuous stream of those entering to learn and those leaving to learn more. Silence became non-existent. Pioneer had certainly awakened.

Summer interests keep students in

The ninety-six days of summer vacation did not offer total relaxation to everyone. Many of Pioneer's students devoted their summer to part-time or full-time jobs. Others were engrossed in curricular summer school courses consisting of two or four hour sessions daily. Some attended scholastic or athletic camps in which they received knowledge or skills beyond those available during a regular school year.

The summer passed, too quickly for some and not quickly enough for others. Gradually the days slipped by and suddenly another school year had begun.

Day in and day out, Mr. Williams was kept busy answering such questions as, "What's a battery for?"

These girls attended camp at Indiana State.

Stu and Becky attended Boy's State and Girl's State at I.U.

Aaron Moon won in the Rodeo Driving competition.

The interests of the student body varied as the days of the year and so there were many awards of different caliber earned in 1968-1969.

Valedictorian and salutatorian, received by Brenda Jones and Stu Sandburg, were among the scholastic awards. Aaron Moon received a plaque for skill in driving. The athletic letters and the National Choral Award were also presented during the school year.

convos broaden interests in students

In the Christmas convocation the high school chorus presented "A Cartoon Christmas".

The Oakland City College choir entertained the student body with a variety of selections.

Last year's convocations provided a pleasant change in routine school life. Thanksgiving and Christmas were holidays which gave opportunities for convocations. In addition, the students of Pioneer witnessed a few musical convocations which were both enlightening and enjoyable. When Pioneer was inspected by North Central, a convocation was held to present the inspectors and the purpose of the inspection.

Groovy fads widen the generation gap at PHS;

The entrance and exit of styles of clothing and grooming from the fashion world was again seen at Pioneer. Last year leather clothes, shoes trimmed with hardware and stack heels, falls, and sideburns were the most popular fads.

Dancer's reap enjoyment at harvest ball

A novelty was introduced at Pioneer when the first Harvest Ball was held. The fruits of harvest time decked the dance floor in soft hues of orange, green, and gold which caused a romantic atmosphere to fall around the couples. Fruit punch and cookies helped make the Harvest Ball a festive evening for all who attended.

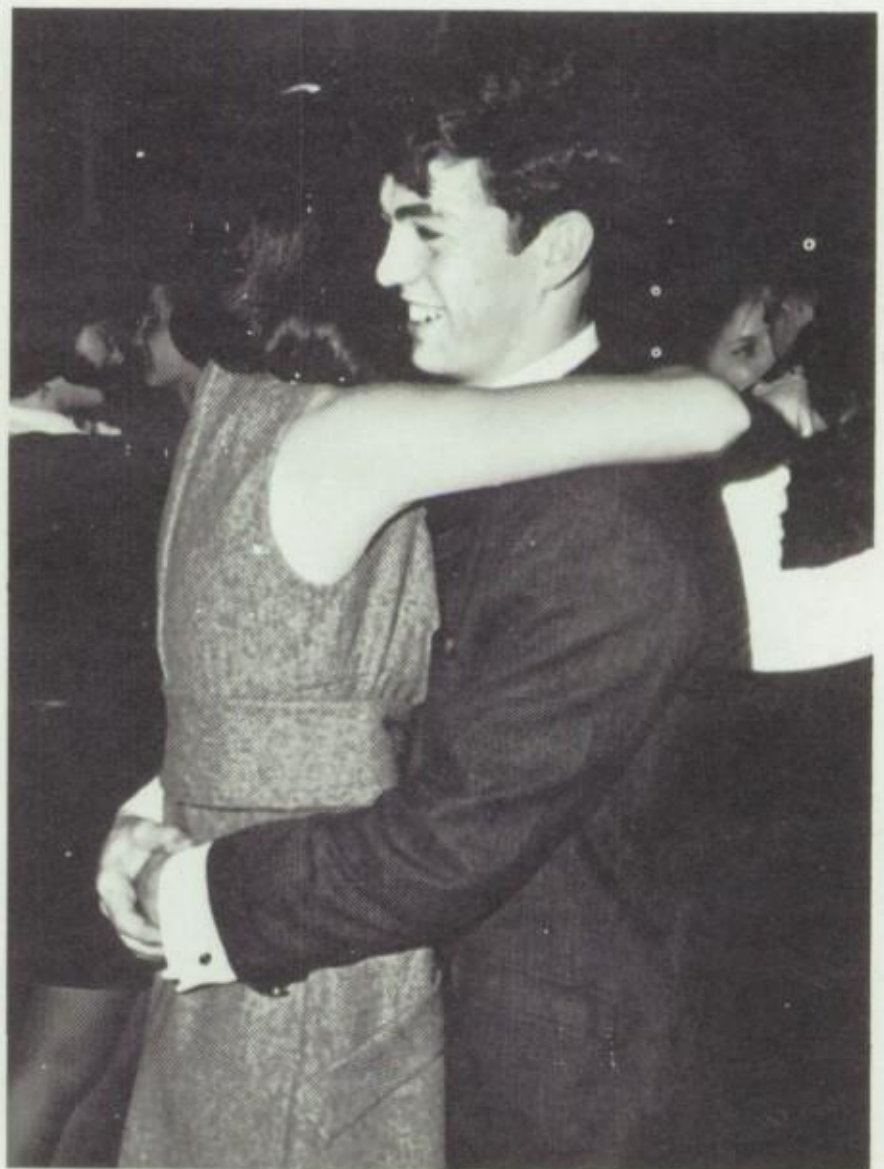

Jerry, Cindy, Connie, and Charlie admire the intricate design of the harvest decorations.

Kris seems to think the dancers are terrific and Tim decides to throw them pennies--Kris's pennies.

Dreamy couples dance to the enchanting music of the band.

"Love Makes the World Go Round" was the theme of the 1969 Sweetheart's Ball. The dance room came alive with original murals depicting various world cultures, both ancient and modern. A rotating globe of shimmering silver emitted dancing reflections which combined with the rhythmic music to lend a romantic setting for the dance. A sparkling pathway led into the room, giving a magical touch to the fanciful evening.

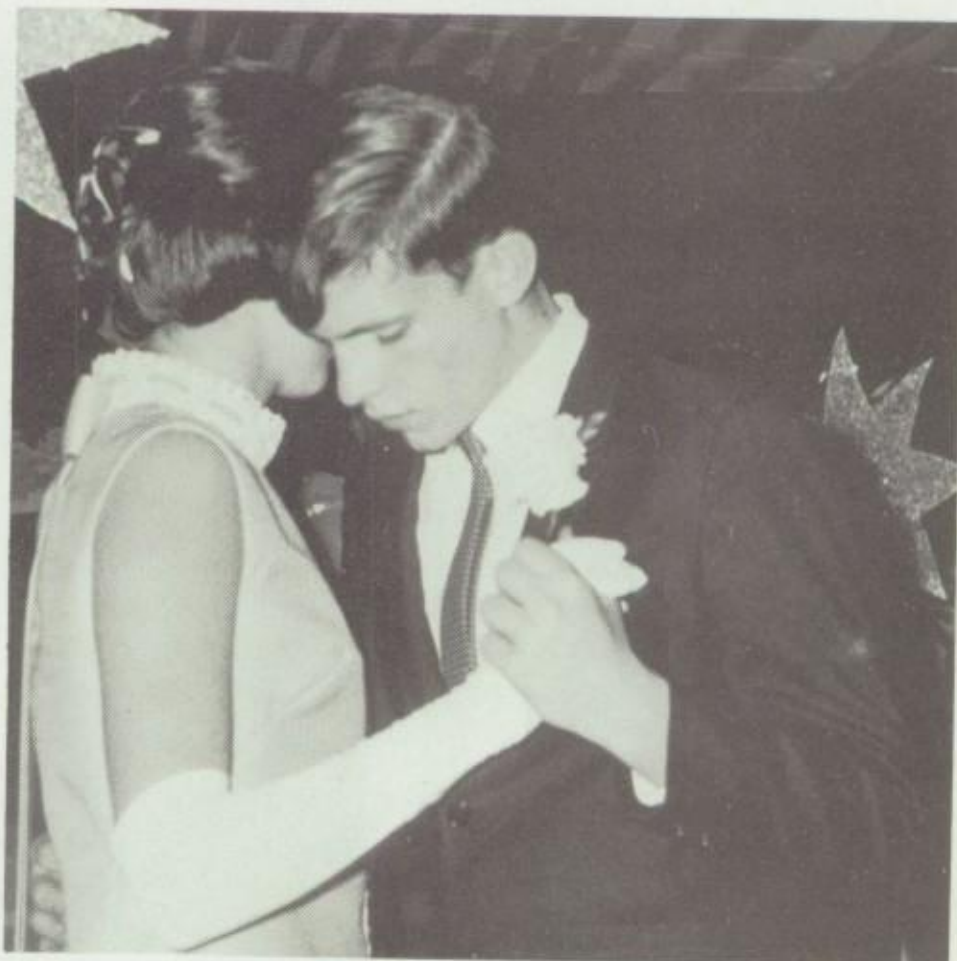

Hail to the Queen . . . Kris Coleman.

Juniors bid farewell to seniors

"Song of the Islands" was a prom to be remembered by all who attended. There were palm trees and a bamboo hut which set the mood for the charming theme. Those who served wore colorful island costumes as they mingled with the couples. "The Dukes" furnished a tropical beat throughout the annual occasion. The time flew and all too soon the island fantasy drew to a close.

Harvey drives Veta and audience insane

"Mr. Dowd, there has been a dreadful mistake."

"Harvey" became a unique figure days before curtain time on November 1. He was "not" seen in the halls or rooms of Pioneer because he was an invisible rabbit. The Juniors displayed some great dramatic talent in this three act comedy in which life was centered around Harvey. Mr. Prill, director, and Margaret McCrea, student director, made the play the success it was.

"What did they do? They took me in there and . . ."

"Here let me give you one of my cards. If you want to reach me call this number, that is the old one."

"Where is that Dr. Chumley? I have a few words to say to him."

Seniors present "Boys, Girls and Other Things"

"Blossom, hold my hand. I feel a crazy spell coming on!"

The Seniors changed the beat of tradition by thrilling the audience with a triple comedy. "Boys, Girls, and Other Things" consisted of "Antic Spring", "Why Teachers Go Nuts", and "If Girls Ask Boys For Dates". Although anxiety preluded its presentation, the three short plays combined into one intrigued many adults and students to attend.

"A flower for big old me? Oh, Kay, how sweet."

"Now pew-pills in order to prove my trust in your acting like perfect little ladies and gentlemen, I'm going to leave the room and permit you to dismiss yourselves from the classroom without my supervision."

"Bubble Trouble", Pioneer's first Musical,

A first for Pioneer was the musical held in the spring of 1968. "Bubble Trouble" ran for three nights and each night an all star cast of Pioneer students gave a super performance which topped all speculations. Each night was a sell-out. The songs and choreography were rehearsed innumerable hours so that the production would be the best possible.

A collage titled "Our Finalism" is displayed on a textured, greyish-blue background. The title is written in large, white, stylized letters, with "Our" at the top, "Final" in the middle, and "ism" at the bottom. The collage includes several photographs and a map. In the top left, there is a photograph of a body of water with several small boats. In the top right, there is a photograph of two students standing together. Below this, on the right side, is a photograph of a student sitting at a desk. In the center, there is a photograph of a student standing in a dark room. At the bottom center, there is a photograph of a student standing in a field. A map is also visible in the top right corner, partially overlapping the "Final" part of the title.

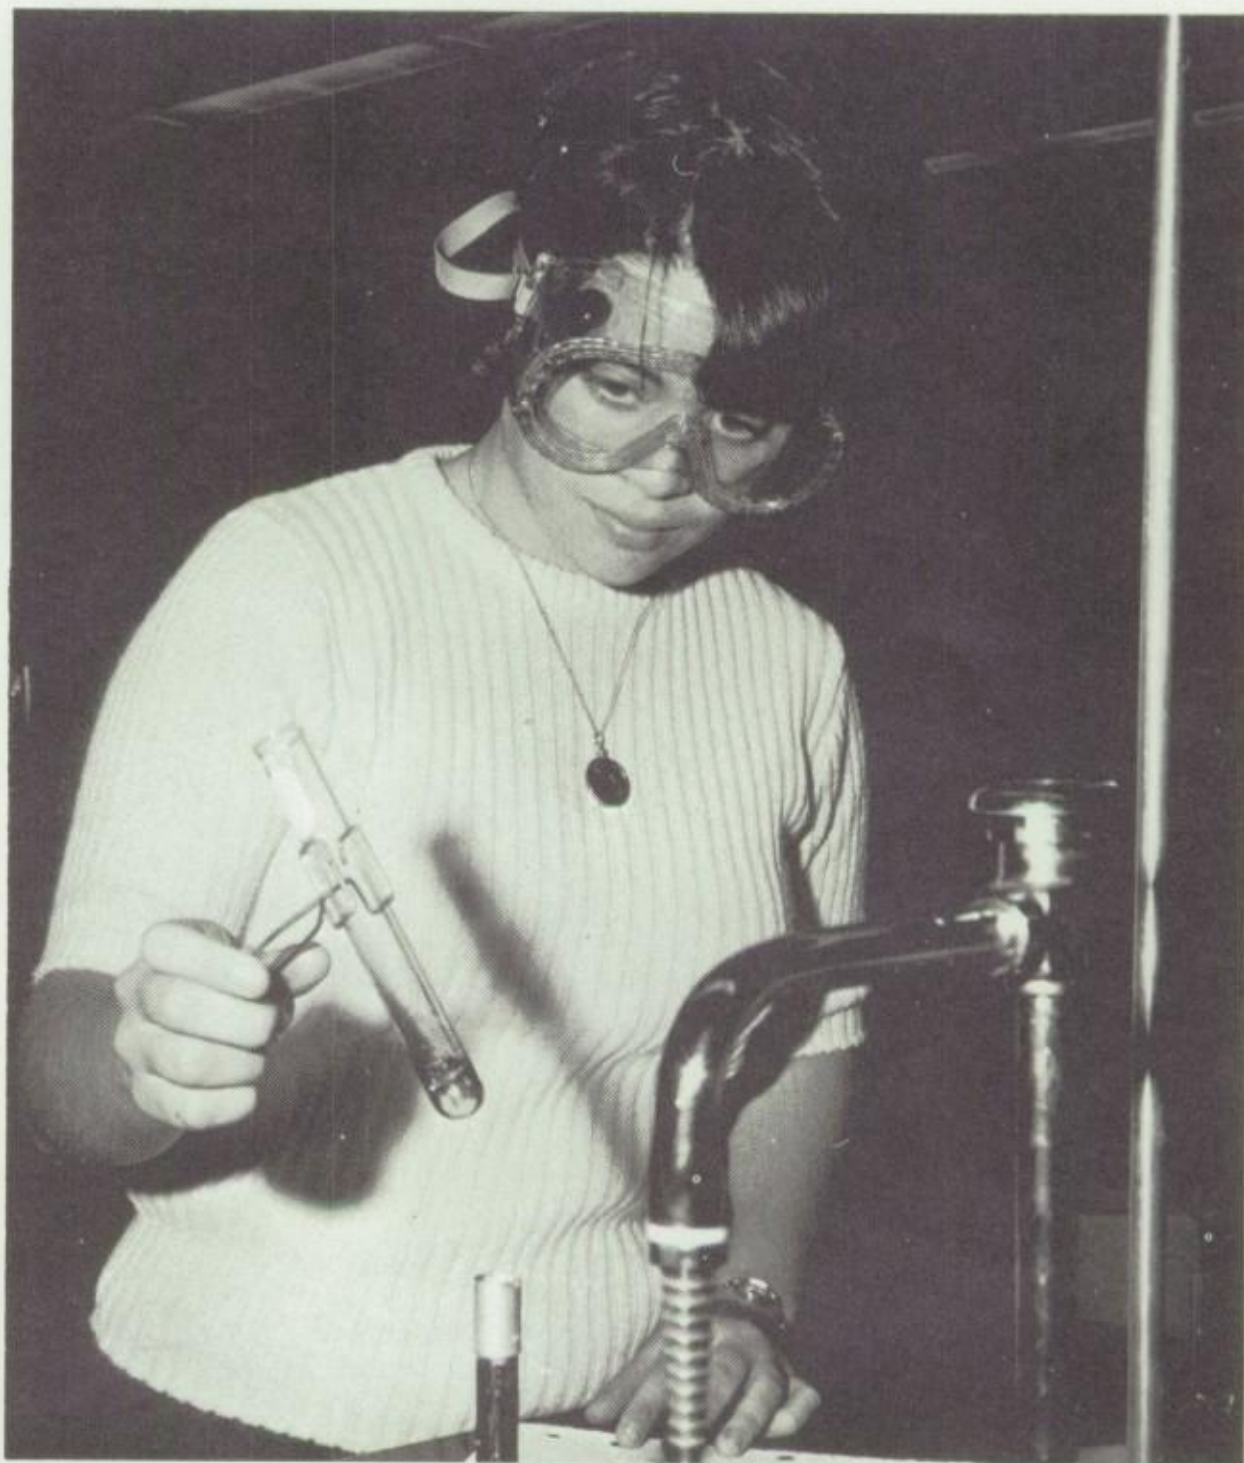

Life consisted of a constant schedule of activities, all of which has a purpose for those people who considered it wise to live a complete life. Education made this wisdom a reality for the leaders of tomorrow's world.

Last year a great variation of subjects were offered at Pioneer because of the need for education in many fields.

Language was very important, for it enabled us to conquer social barriers, of which there were many.

Business, Science, and Math were necessary for modern world of the future.

Social Studies permitted students to build a future on history and the arts made life more rewarding than ever.

Developing technique in drafting class requires intense concentration and patience. Tom, John, and Bob exhibit these factors as they labor over their drawings.

Drafting program added to shop classes

A strange beat was created in the shop classes each day as hammers hammered and saws sawed throughout each period. The din caused by the use of these instruments did not bother those who were using them. These instruments led to many well-constructed and smoothly finished projects. The quality of workmanship of the shop students was to be commended. Their talents and diligence were revealed in the detail of the more difficult projects. No wonder that shop is called an industrial art.

Mr. Dorton possess the skills needed to efficiently instruct shop courses.

Realizing that accuracy counts, Tom takes his time preparing his sketches.

Today's students, tomorrows businessmen

The beat continued throughout the business rooms. You could have walked the halls and heard typewriter keys clicking, pencils writing, and rulers tapping.

Mr. Aldridge, Mr. Snider, and Mrs. Munson worked very hard during the day preparing the students for their jobs in the future years. In the General Business, Bookkeeping, Salesmanship, Secretarial Training, and Shorthand classes many new machines and forms were used. The new equipment helped make 1968-1969 a successful business year.

Christina Cook doesn't seem worried while filling in her bookkeeping lesson.

Learning to manage books is one of the big jobs in industrial management. Here Mr. Aldridge's bookkeeping class learns the basic principles of balancing the books.

Jeanie and Beth have eyes on books while doing their timed writings.

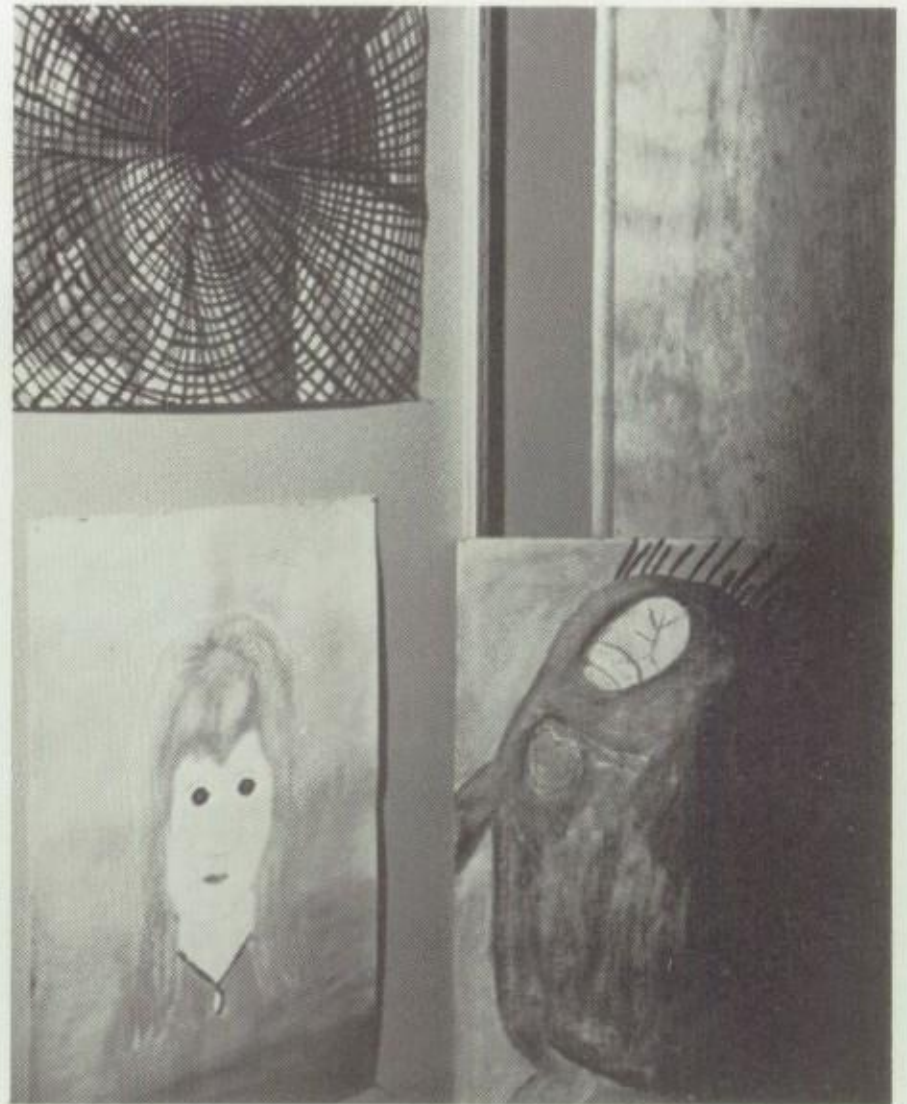

Mr. Aldridge seems to have the attention of the class so he can give last minute instructions.

Art is a form of expression priceless to the soul because it is part of the soul. Students in art class learned to use a method of expression to which their soul adopted best. Painting, sketching, modeling clay, and constructing original space modulators were just a few of the various projects of the art classes in 1968-1969.

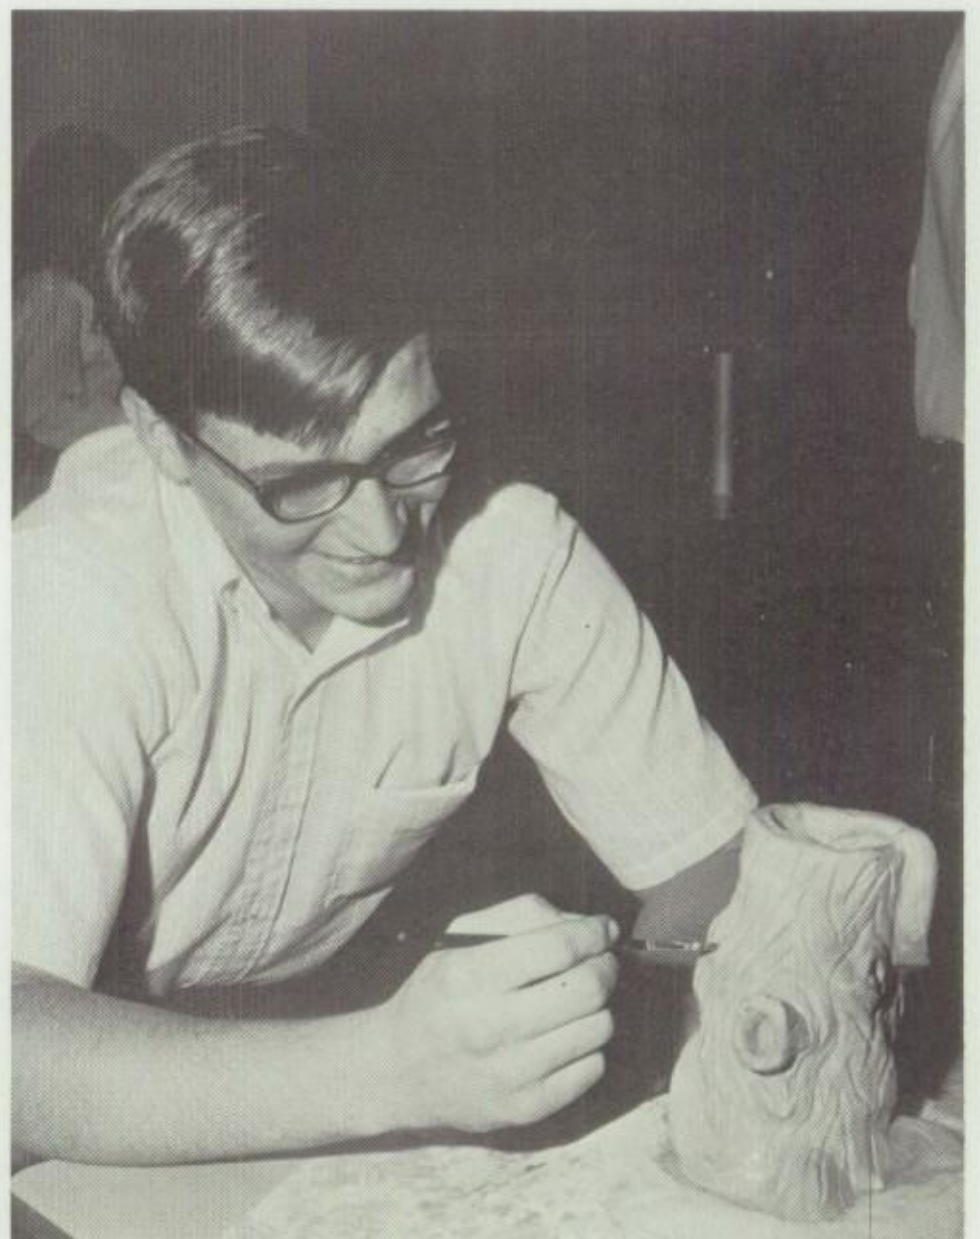

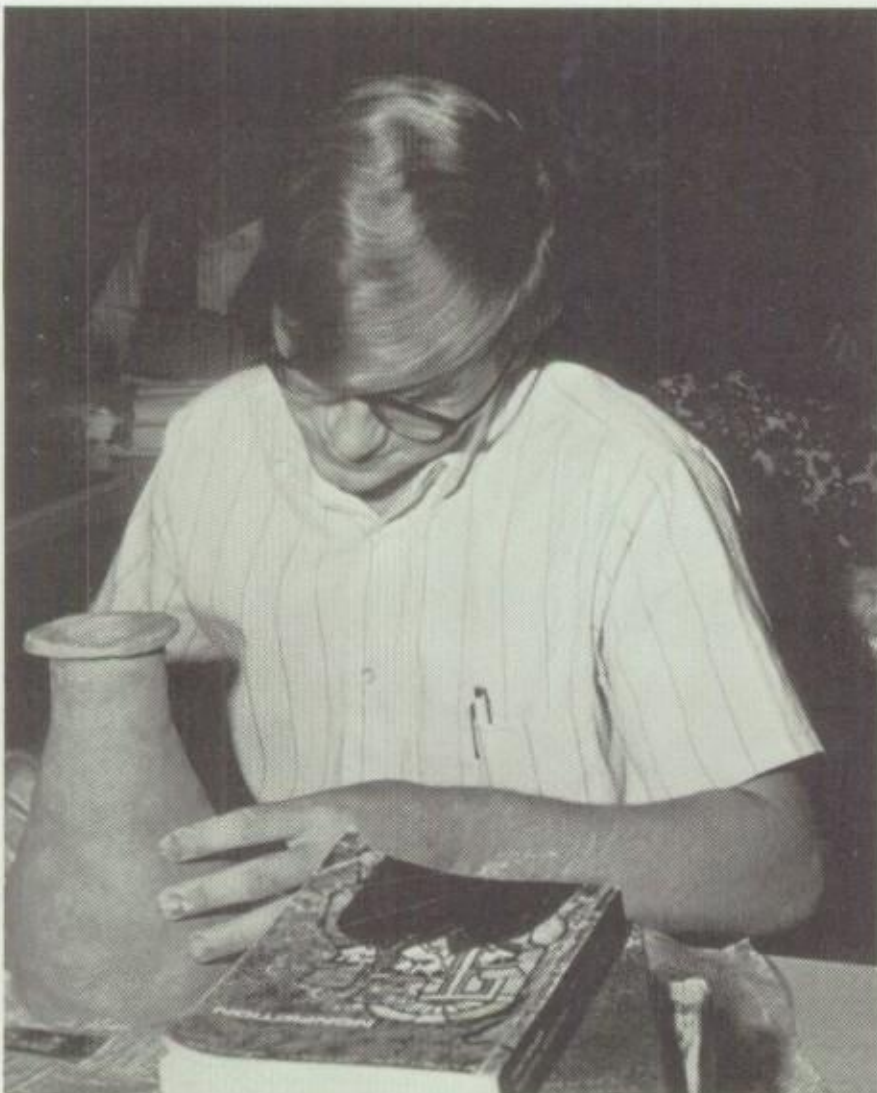

Rhonda McVay displays a necessary skill in constructing her mobile--a steady hand.

Student artists find hidden talents;

Tom knows it's supposed to stay together but he is afraid to move in fear it will fall apart.

Gary seems very happy while putting the finishing touch on his unfired pottery.

The strange beat that was heard in the home economics room was the sound of spoons tapping and sewing machines buzzing. These sounds were creating some very beautiful and tasty things. The home economics class was preparing these girls, future homemakers of tomorrow, for everyday tasks that must be learned. When these girls live and care for their own homes, they will know much about cooking, sewing, and home care.

Mrs. Kendall and Mrs. Kraining were given much of the credit as they gave much of their time to the girls.

Homemakers of tomorrow learn basics

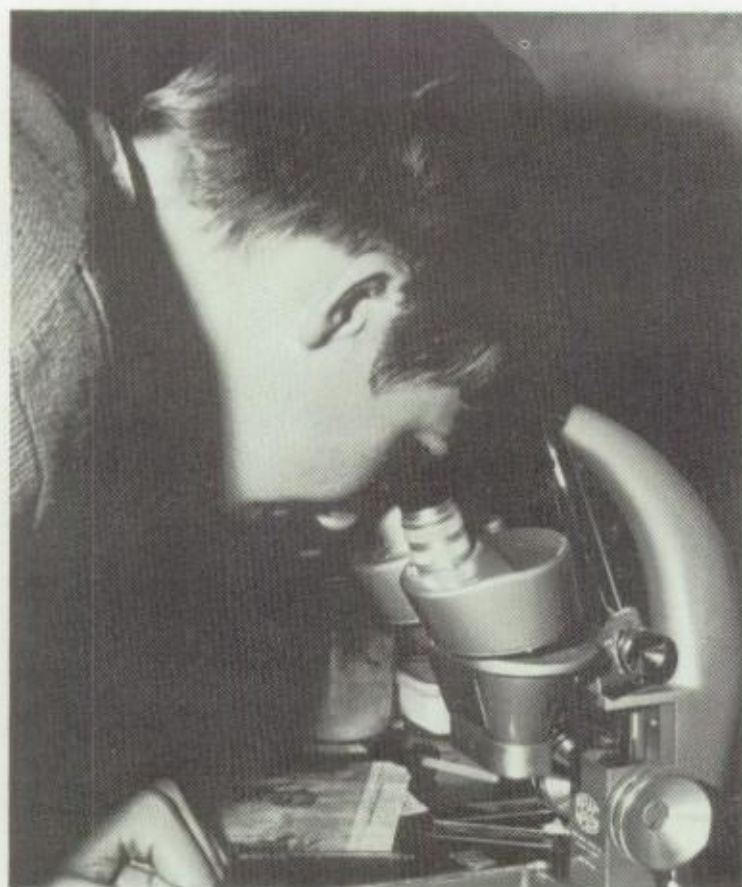

These students can almost taste the finished product as Mrs. Kendall prepares the turkey.

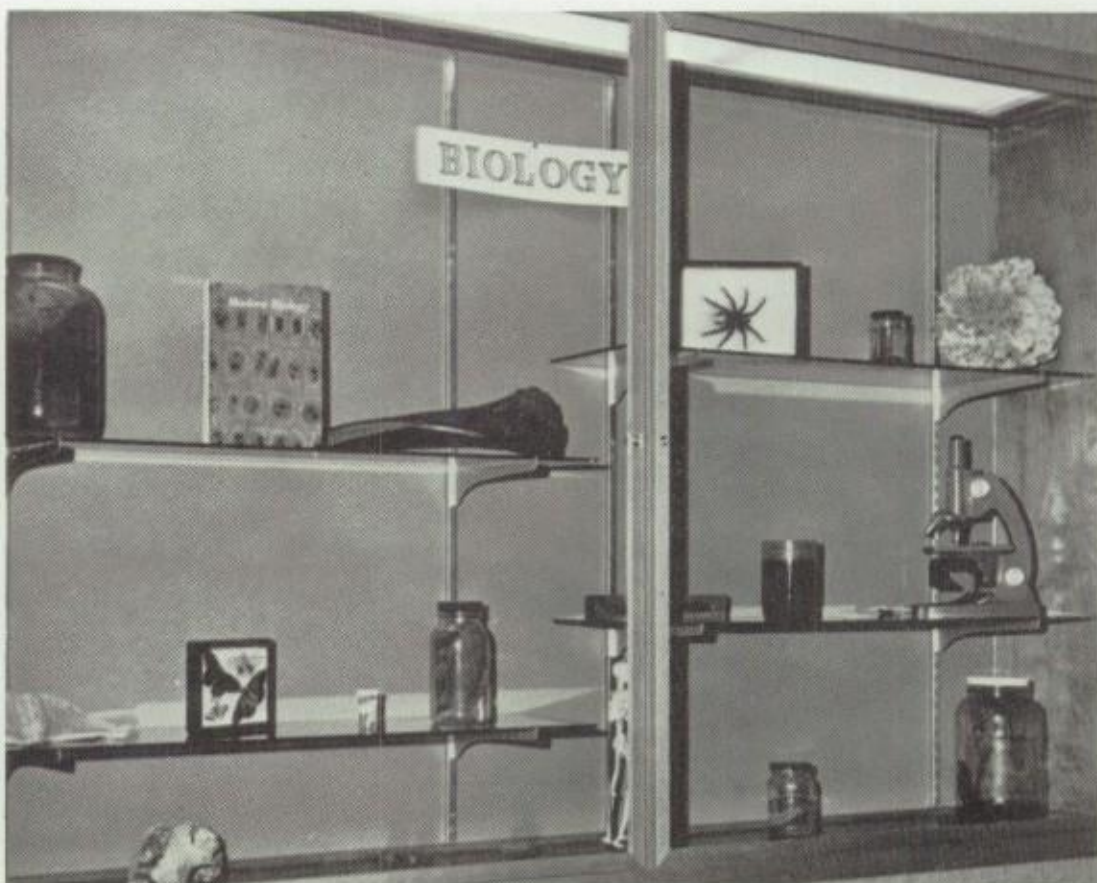

Julia shows Kendra the correct way to blend the ingredients into the batter.

The senior girls seem to have a blank look as Mrs. Kendall tells them the different types of bones.

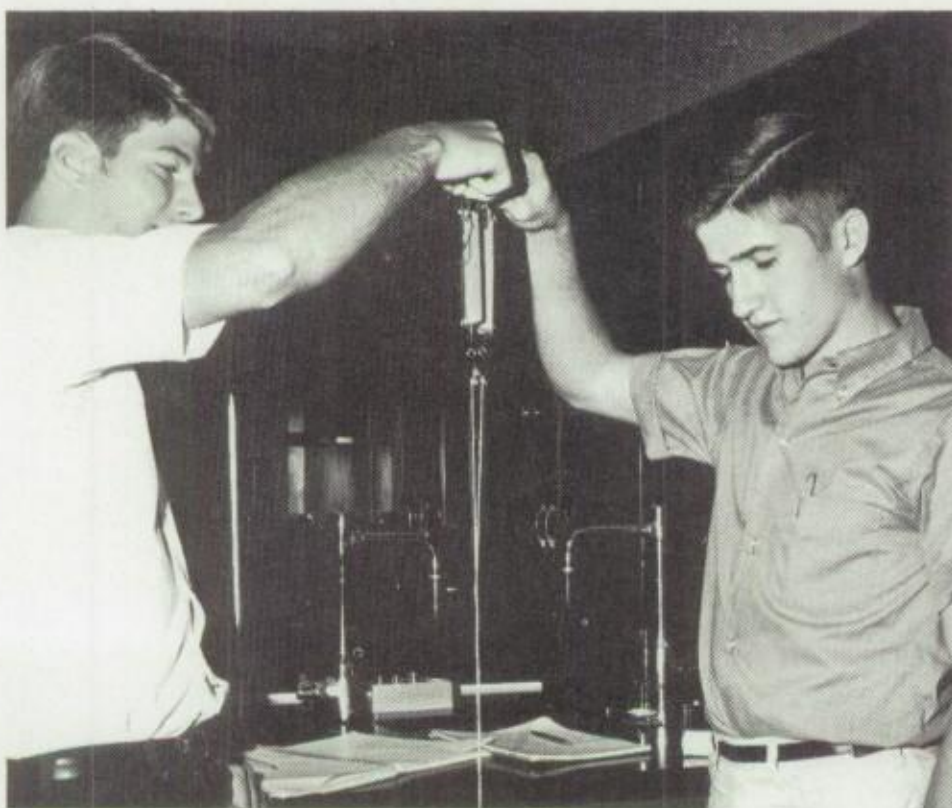

Science and math combine to give students

One of Mr. Slentz's students seems to be very interested in what he sees.

This display case shows the different fields biology students explore throughout the year.

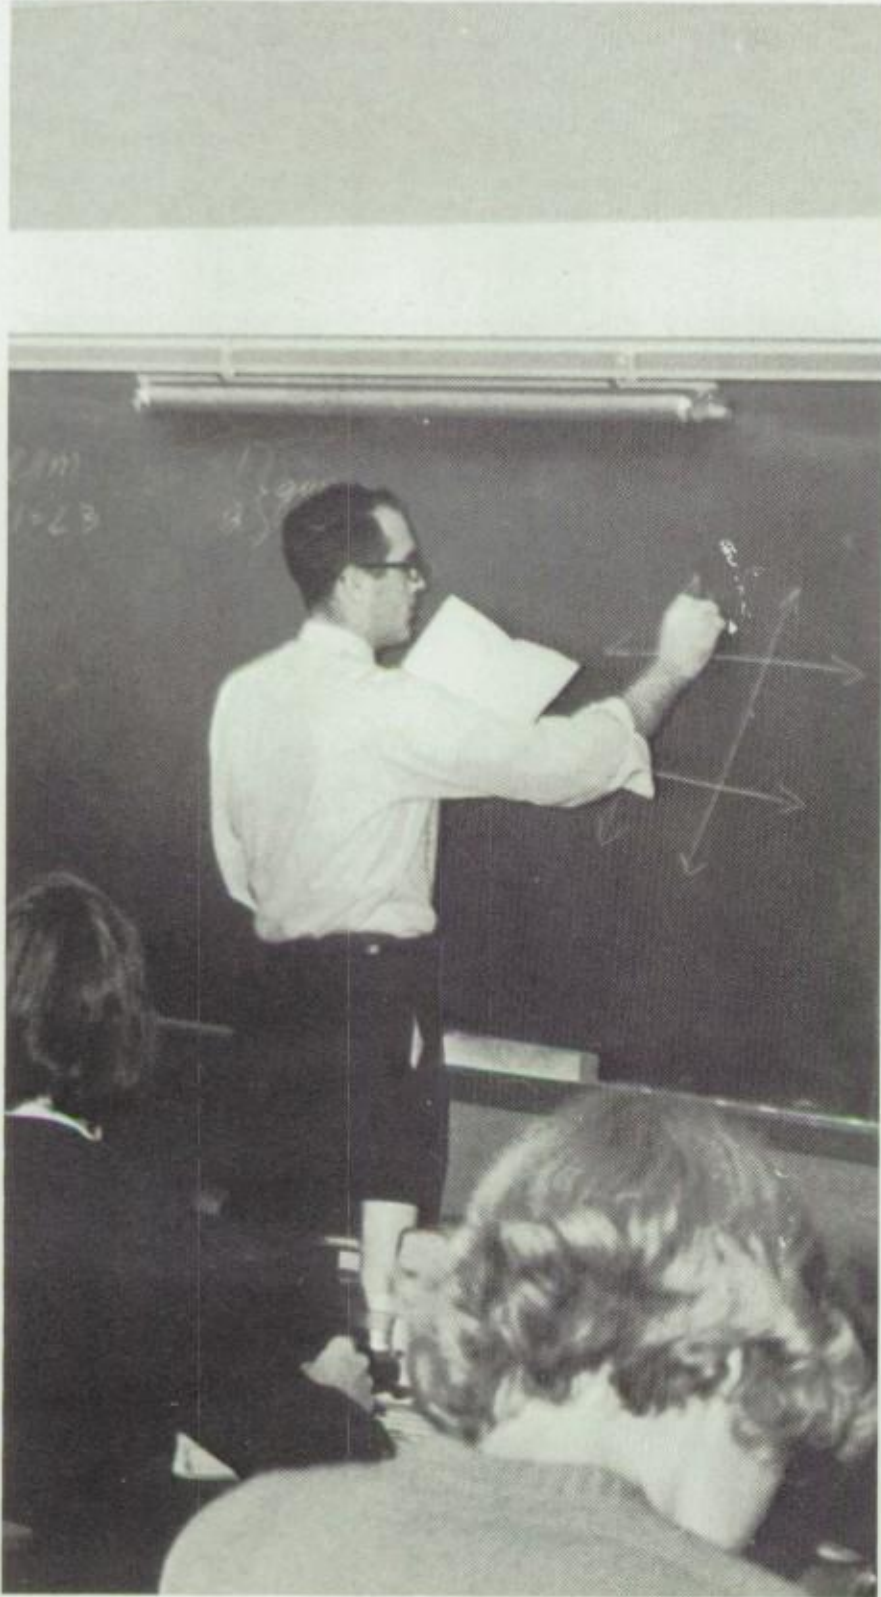

Larry and Stu seems very determined to please the teacher by getting the exact weights.

The word "science" means knowledge. There is almost unlimited knowledge to be gained in the fields of science. Life of flora and fauna, structure of elements, and various characteristics of energy were among the many fields expanded on in the science classes each day. Biology, chemistry, physics offered areas of interest to everyone.

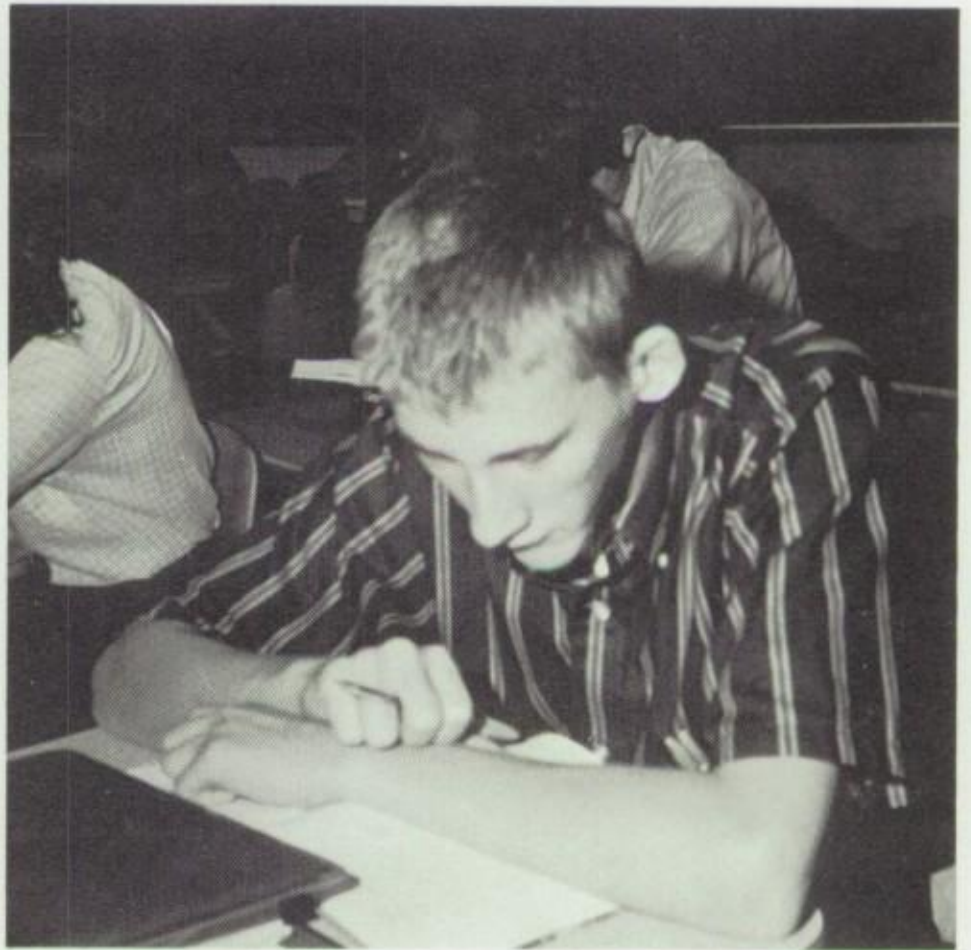

Dick mentally calculates figures as they are emitted by the watchamacallit.

new ideas in technological fields

Bud concentrates on one of the many algebraic equations in his assignment.

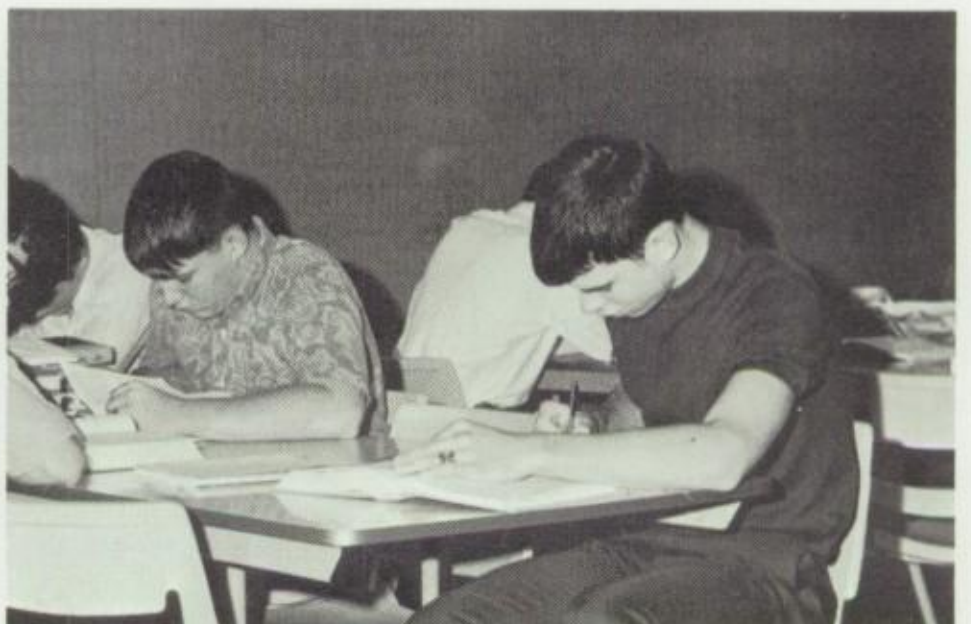

Computation is a technique of skill and logic. Mathematics offered many variations of computation. Algebra consisted of equations and their practical application. Geometry required more reasoning because of the proofs involved. Trigonometry covered angles and their measurements. Many students took mathematics because they were interested in it; others wished to apply their training to a mathematical career. Some decided to relate their knowledge to a career indirectly connected with mathematics.

Mr. Cunningham is trying to make math easier for these students by using a diagram.

Social studies initiate team teaching;

Mr. Neel and Miss Chapman were kept busy during the year grading papers and preparing intriguing lectures for their team teaching classes. It isn't as easy as it seems.

Christina and Brenda are deep in thought of who our future leaders of America will be.

The social studies department of Pioneer was accented by a new method of teaching in 1968-1969. Team teaching provided variety from the beat of a daily classroom routine as students experienced each six weeks with a different instructor. Lectures and individual study classes were used in order to cover a greater amount of material. This method guided many students through history and government.

Sharon doesn't understand why Mr. Church won't slow down with his lecture.

dramatics . . . to acting; speech . . . to politics?

Julie delivers an impromptu in preparation for the next meet.

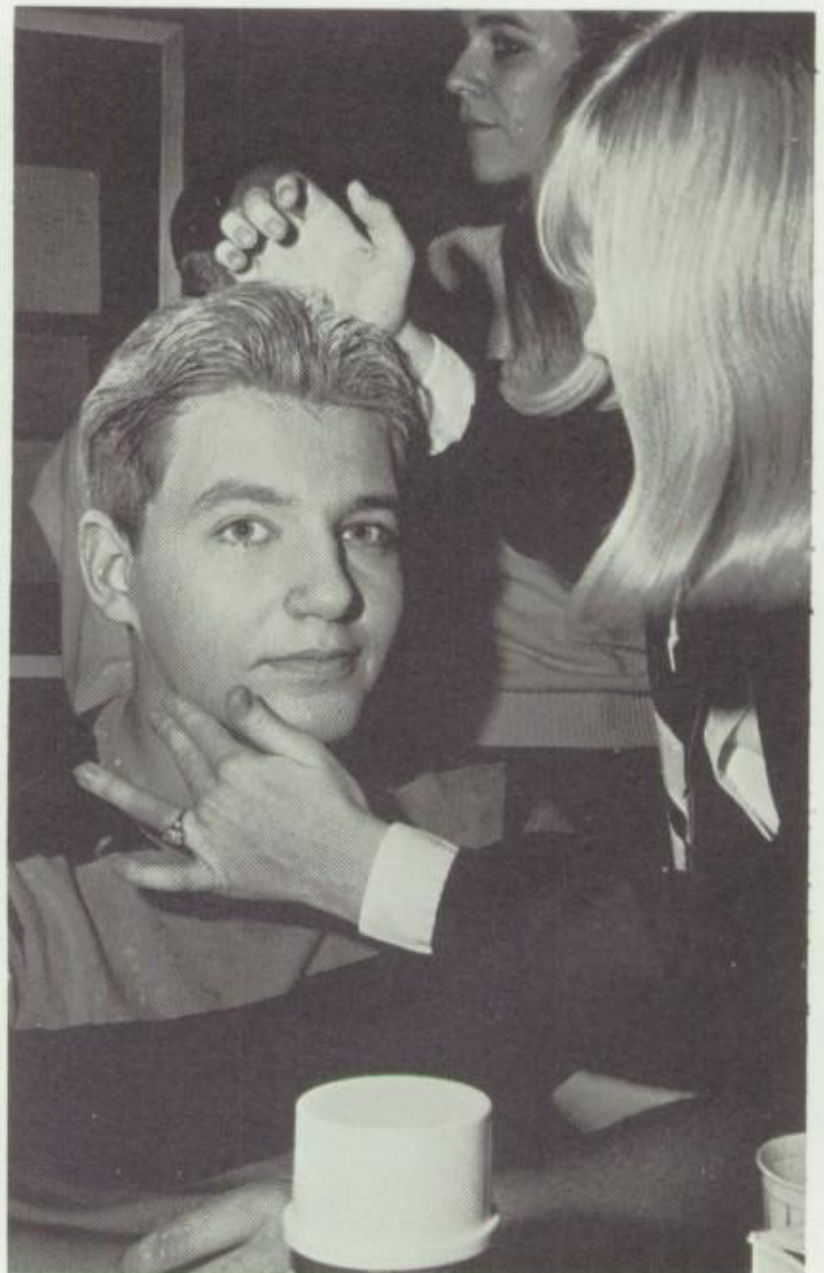

Jim seems to be carried away by fond thoughts of skiing as he prepares his extemp speech.

Fundamentals of acting were learned last year as dramatic students were offered basic training in accenting phrases properly and expressing them with gesticulations. Make-up is a very important factor in the field of dramatics and the methods of applying it were mastered. Dramatics class sparked hidden talents and offered a shift from routine classwork.

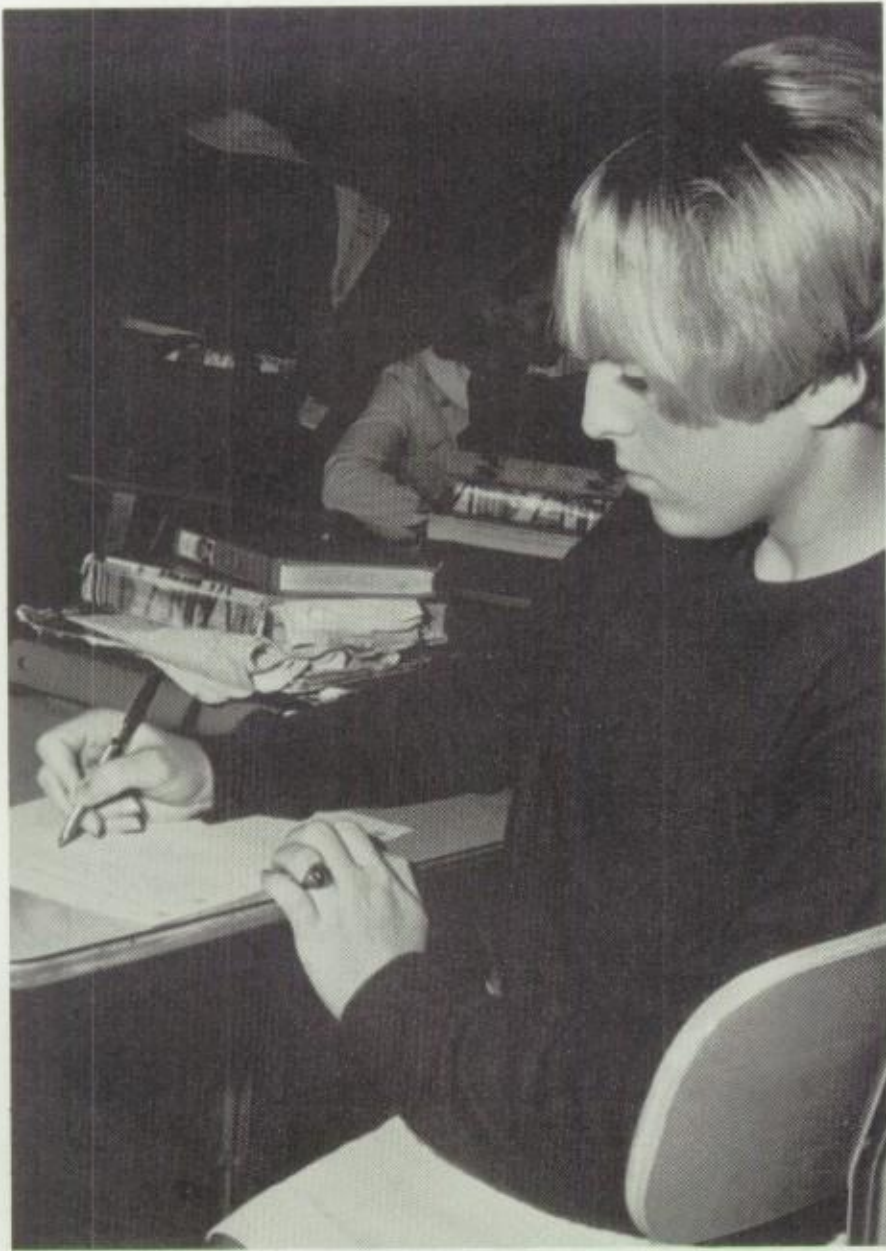

Mr. Prill assists his students in understanding speech fundamentals.

Make-up certainly does something for Bruce!?!

English was perhaps the most important subject students endeavored in. The arts of writing and speaking properly were ever-present in every class as students learned to include them in the beat of their everyday lives as well as in the classroom. Miss Jones and Mr. Linton instructed the various fundamentals of the most widely spoken language in the world. Everyone experienced a fruitful year of English during 1968-1969.

Miss Jones English class didn't seem to understand her explanation of noun verb agreement.

Mr. Mentzer assigns tomorrow's lesson through student earphones.

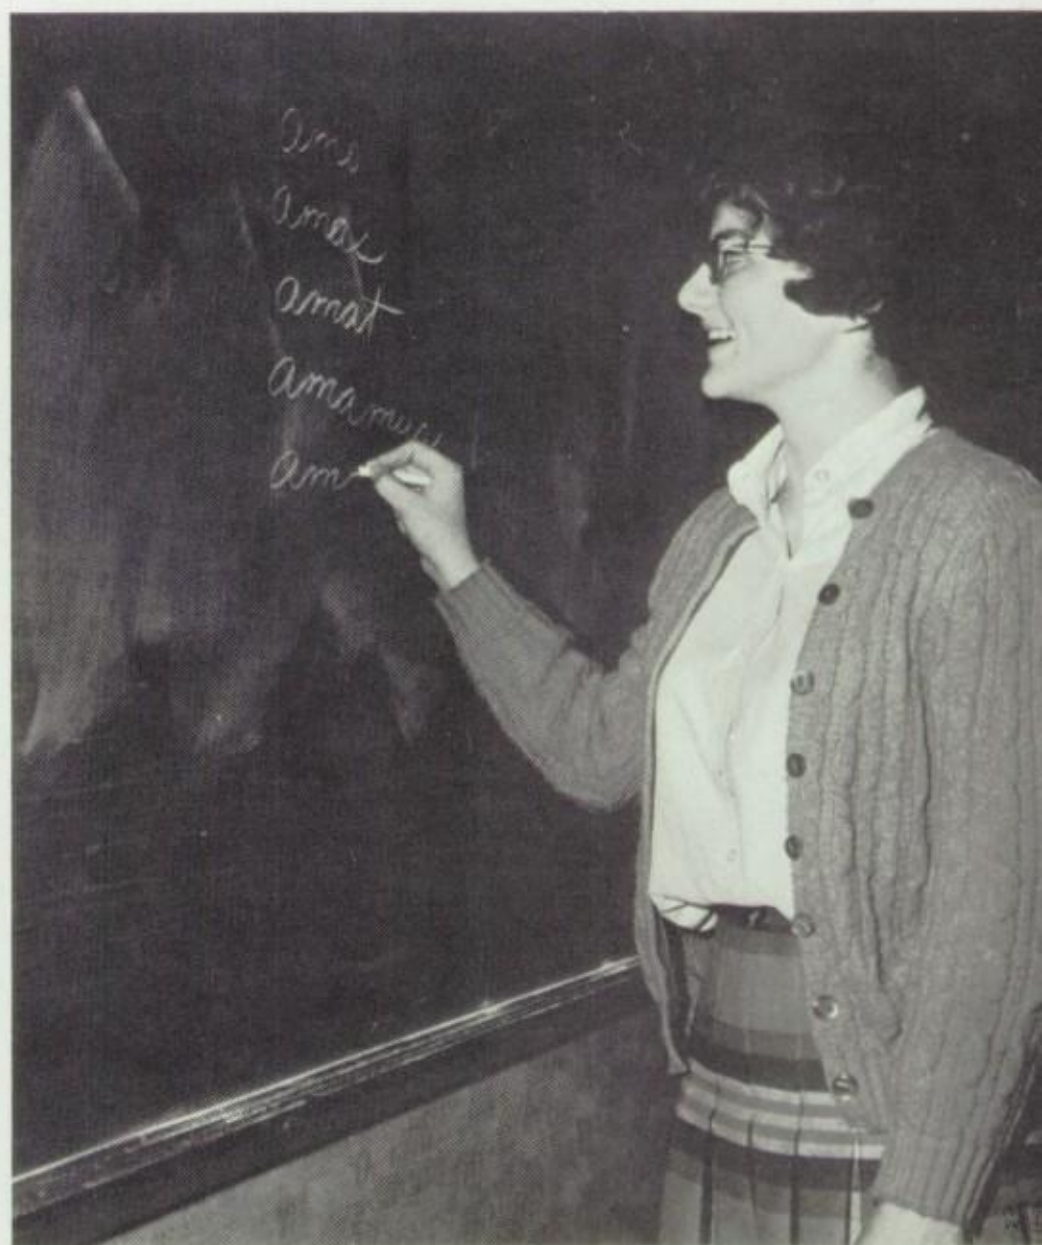

After finishing their Latin project, these students keep their fingers crossed and hope for success.

Language students find foreign beat

For many Pioneer students, the study of a foreign language provided an extra background for learning and developing skills in many fields. Latin and Spanish introduced new horizons to the unaware and related sequences and consequences of a world of long ago. Today's world has greatly benefited by their survival through the beat of the ages.

The others listen attentively as Francisco plays "Home, Home on the Range."

I love, you love, he loves, we love, you love, they love-- according to Latin conjugation, 'everybody' loves!

Music classes utilize the beat;

Mr. Parente and Mr. Scott make big plans for coming events--the biggest of all, the musical.

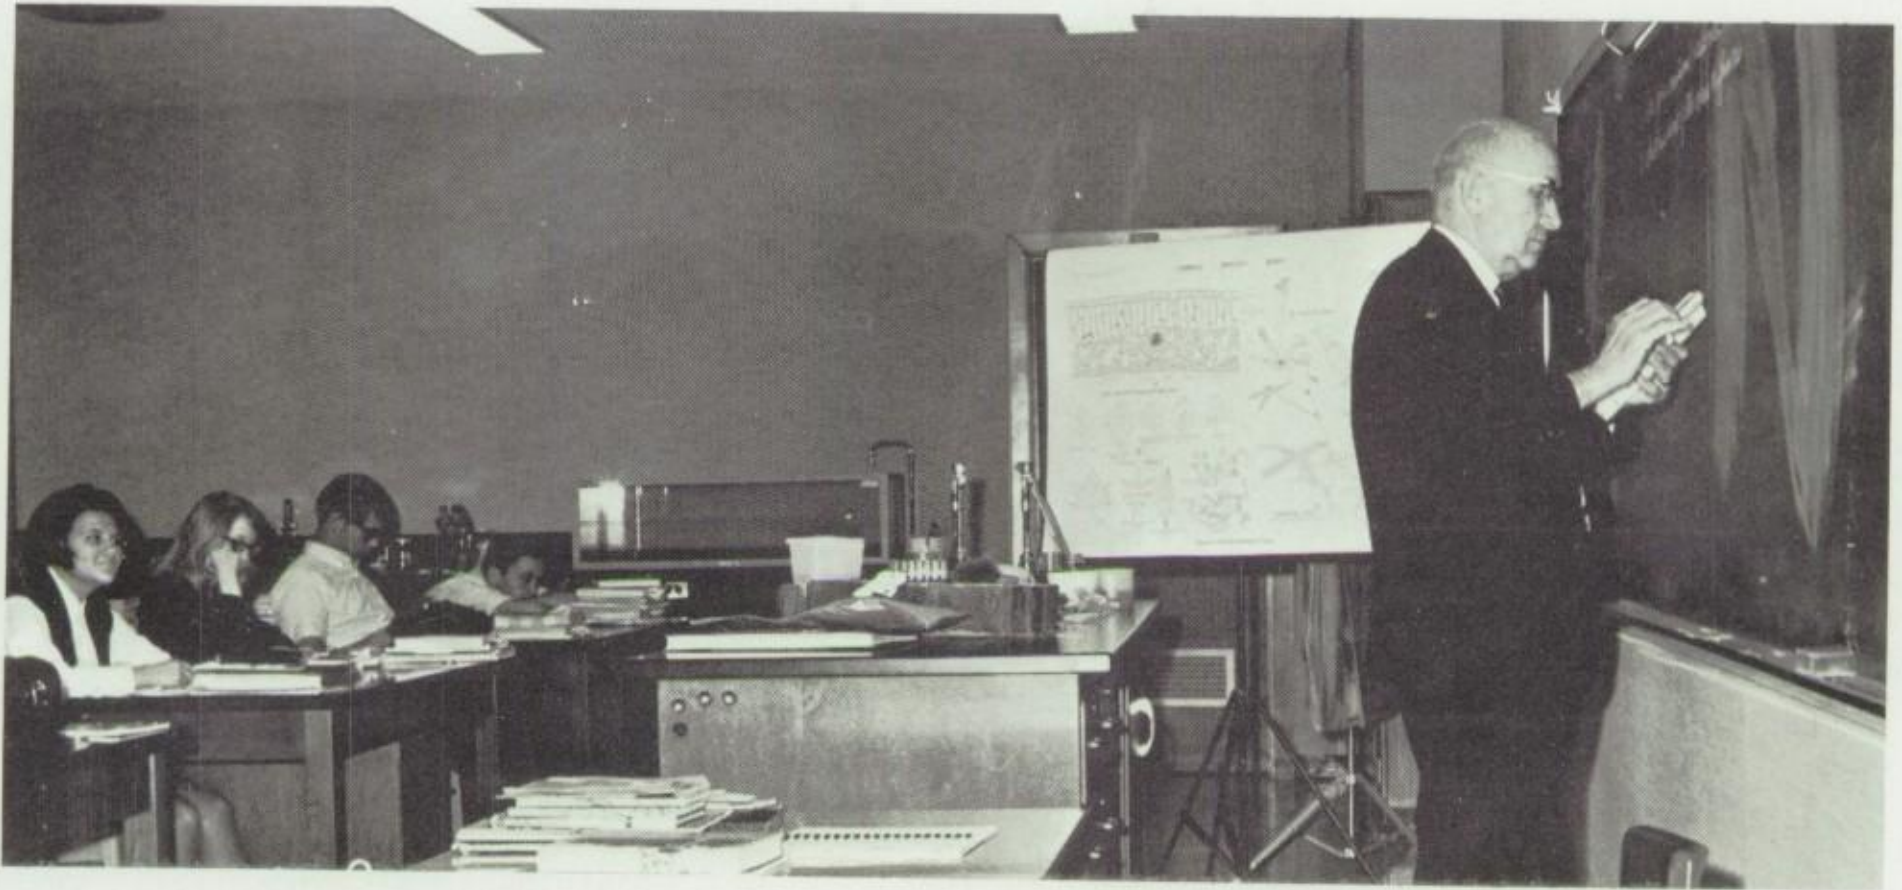

Ever since civilization began, birds have been revered for their songs of happiness or sorrow. Through the ages instruments were invented to simulate or take the places of bird's song. People began to write their own songs to play on these instruments and soon the world was filled with music. It was the job of music students to learn about these men and their music.

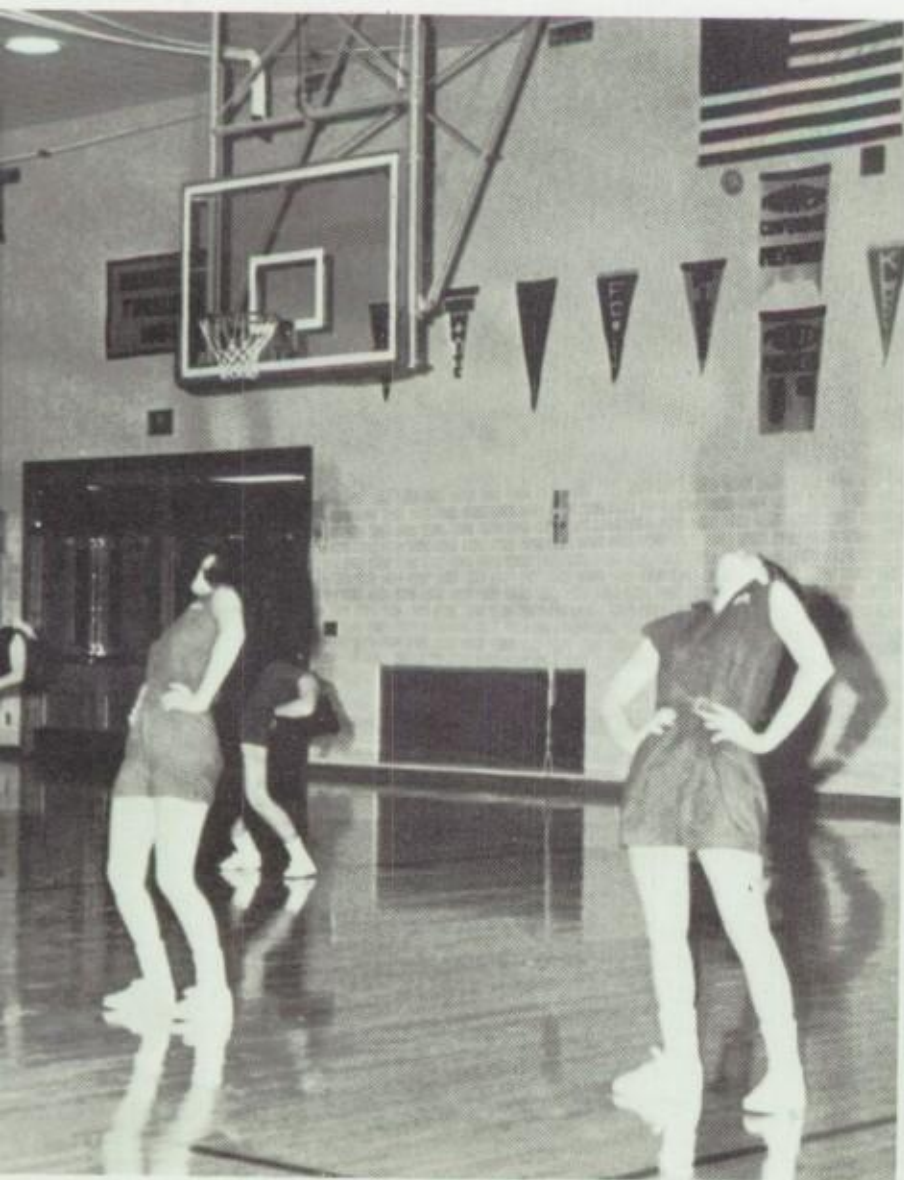

Mr. Scott seems to be enjoying himself as he directs his class.

modern tempo requires healthy bodies

Tomorrow's leaders need to be physically, as well as mentally, fit to be able to accept and conquer the challenges of the future.

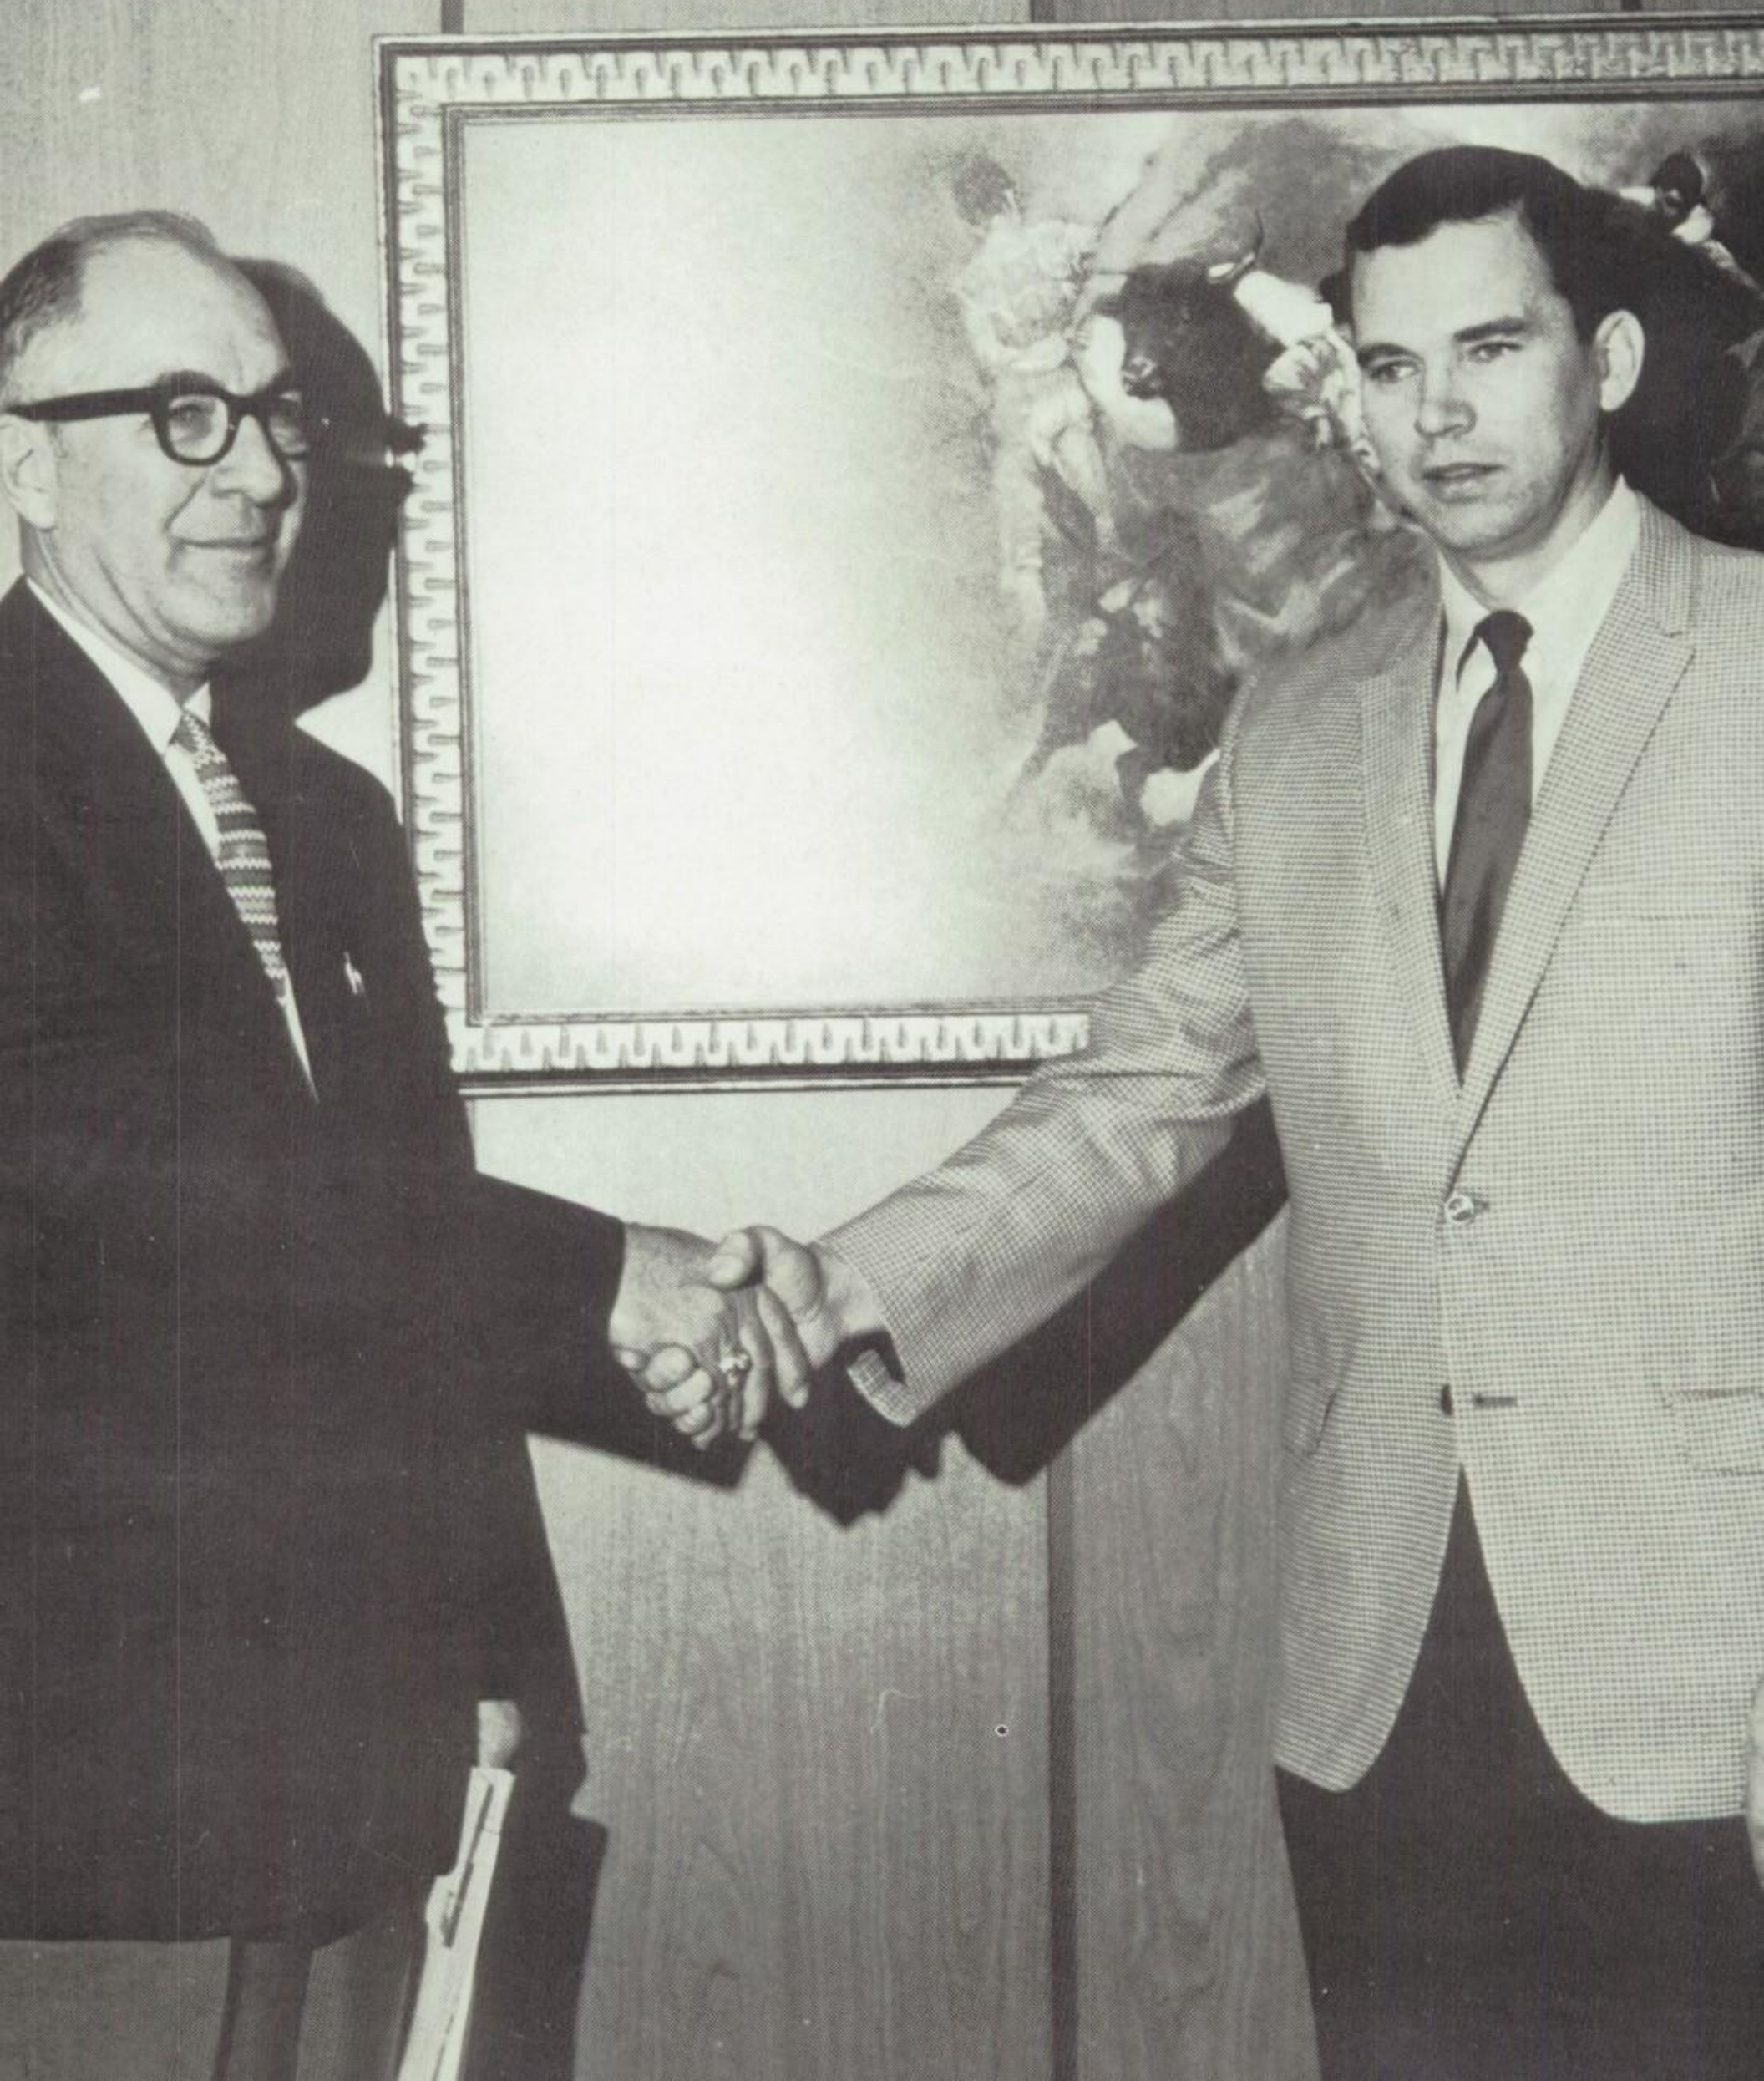

Those who studied health were made aware of the importance of complete fitness and of beats--heart beats, eardrum vibrations, and regular sight impulses.

Physical education students coordinated their bodies to healthful and entertaining activities whether performed solitarily or in a group.

FACULTY

The beat changed somewhat this year as Pioneer continued to strengthen its curricular facilities. A very important addition was made to our competent administration as Mr. Shumaker became our new principal. He set a new tempo for the endless beat of activities at Pioneer High.

A new technique in instruction called team teaching entered the social studies department as two or three teachers addressed a large body of students equivalent in number to that of two or three averaged-sized classes.

Though the beat has been revised it still continues, on and on and . . .

"The beat goes on" with new administration;

Mr. Frantz faces many responsibilities as assistant principal at P.H.S. He is the adviser for the junior high and helps Mr. Shumaker with the high school.

He is also in charge of the cafeteria and the book store.

As the beat goes on so goes the administrative staff. However, a revision of last year's score brought two new school board members, James Musall and Leonard Burton, and a new principal, Robert Shumaker.

Mr. Shumaker and Mr. Frantz conducted the beat at the high school.

As school board President, Mr. Roger Ide plays in integral part at P.H.S.

Our school board consists of Robert Gibbs-- Superintendent; Harold Roller-- Secretary; Howard Goodrich-- Vice-President; James Musall-- Assistant Secretary; Leonard Burton-- Treasurer.

Mr. Gibbs and Mr. Shumaker add new tempo

Mr. Williams and Mrs. Brandt work hard to make sure everyone gets his needed credits.

Mrs. McCrea is concerned with student sight, hearing, and general health.

Serving as Mr. Gibbs' secretaries, Madeline March and Betty Smith get the record book up to date.

The roll of the secretaries in the high school and superintendent offices were like the beat of the drums behind a symphony, always there but never getting quite enough credit for the important positions they hold.

Pioneer added another guidance counselor to facilitate lending a hand to those in need of assistance with schedules or solutions to personal problems.

Mrs. McCrea was always busy trying to keep the students of the whole corporation healthy. Wherever her beat carried her, she was always cheerful and friendly to everyone.

Marjorie Goltry, Betty Hale, and Mary Henry are the cadence majors of the continuous beat. Their duties are teacher's aid, secretary to the principal, bonded treasurer and bookstore manager, respectively.

ORGANIZATIONS

Extracurricular activities in the forms of organizations offered a great deal of enjoyment to the students of Pioneer last year. They provided relaxation of both mind and body from the strenuous beat of the daily classroom schedules. For those who participated in them, personalities were strengthened and social poise was improved. Although the basic principles of these organizations were widely various, they all offered opportunities in leadership and co-operation which led to success for a great number of students. Their sponsors helped better our world.

G.A.A. had a successful year in 1968-1969. The year's activities were centered around one project, earning enough points to attend a private camp in the late spring. New activities were planned, such as ice-skating, snow sculpture, and a Bike-a-thon. Of course volleyball, basketball, and badminton were also included on the calendar schedule. Miss Woods assisted the officers quite a lot scheduling, planning, and organizing activities. The officers attended a camp in northern Indiana early in the year to get new ideas to make G.A.A. a better organization than ever before.

Mrs. Key assisted the librarians in realizing and satisfactorily completing their tasks. Their job was an infinite one, for they kept the world's knowledge.

Pioneer's Speech and Debate teams accomplished much last year in awards and personal feelings of triumph. Poise and personality were put to the test every time our teams speak before people unfamiliar to them. Mr. Prill assisted the members of Speech and Debate in getting as much as they possibly could out of every speech they presented.

"Marching 100" steps high for Pioneer;

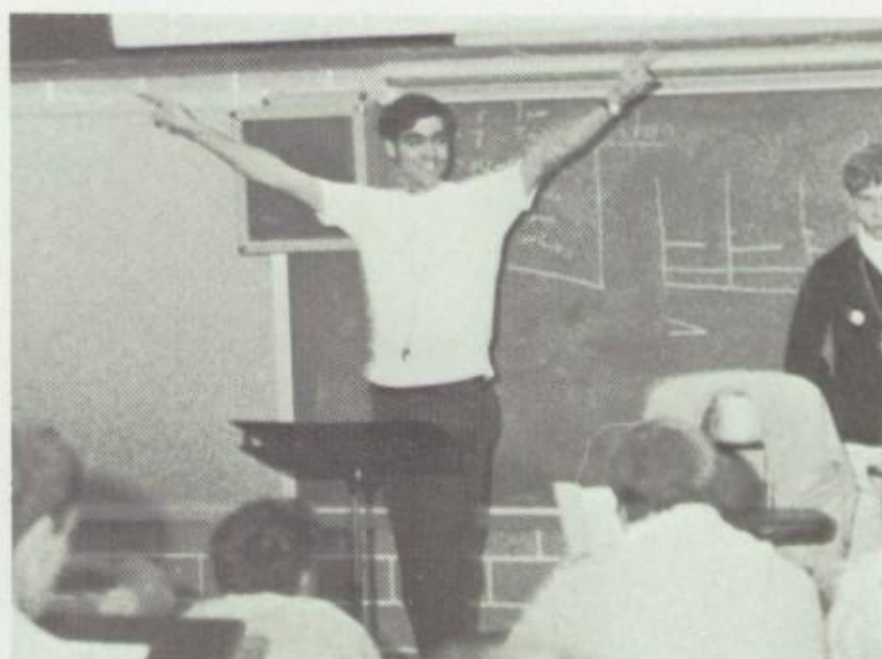

To conform to the spirit of our high-stepping band, a new title was awarded it --the "Marching 100". The black and gold banner was borne in many parades and events in this area, perhaps more often than ever before. The band made an appearance at every home basketball game and gave a fine performance every time. The Pom-pom girls and twirlers spent many hours on routines that paralleled the beat of the band. The "Marching 100" made a great sound in '68-'69.

choir boasts largest membership in years

The tempo of chorus activities ranged from a presto to a lento and back again as extra concerts were added to the usual Christmas and spring performances. Last year Mr. Frank Parente directed one hundred fifty-five voices as songs of varying moods were presented to both live and television audiences. The voice quality of the choir was improved through hard work and many hours of rehearsal. Four Christmas programs saw the Pioneer High School chorus in action as it sung both old favorites and modern carols. With spring came a musical and the spring concert and the choir was there to complete a successful year.

Panthers cheered on by 100

Mrs. Key sponsored the Pep Club, Cheerleaders, Sunshine, and Librarians clubs.

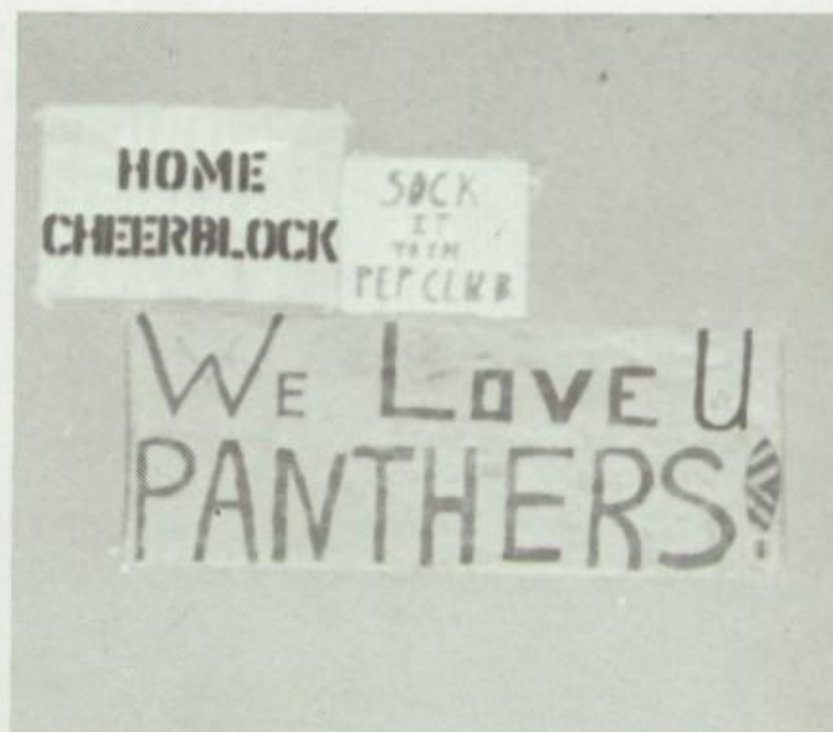

"Panthers got the power!" was a frequent chant of the Pep Club as it cheered our boys on to victory. Gold blouses and dark skirts for the girls and gold sweaters and dark slacks for the boys became the usual attire at each home game. Many times the Pep Club had a will to win that would match any of the players' will and when these two wills joined, the Panthers were victorious. Between games or at the end of the second quarter, the band would provide music to which the Pep Club would perform a routine of motions. School spirit rose when our Pep Club was there.

SPORTS

This year's complete athletic program again was a total success. Many excellent athletes were produced from this fine program, and the school's traditional sportsmanship was projected in all competition. Teamwork and school spirit, as well as the fine coaching staff present in each field, attributed to many Pioneer victories.

Harriers preach new gospel under Church;

Steve Farrer, Pioneer's third man, expects to carry the brunt of the Panther attack next season.

The 1968-69 Pioneer High School cross country team had a successful year under the leadership of a new coach. Mr. Church pushed the team to a 7--4 season.

The team spent a rigid training session at the Indiana Dunes and proved throughout the season the trip's benefits. With each individual contributing his endurance, the team proved to be respected contender in the area and finished a strong second in the Mid West Conference. Although the team will lose four vital seniors, the underclassmen are still expected to take up the slack. Their scores are as follows:

Pioneer 20	Winamac 38
Pioneer 25	West Central 34

With much physique and a lot of dedication to the sport, the 1968-69 wrestling team made their second wrestling campaign an immense success. Combined with great coaching and superb personnel, the grappling team showed much improvement over the initial year. The team's hustle and desire was also a contributing factor to the much improved attendance over last year's wrestling season.

Finish very strong in midwest conference

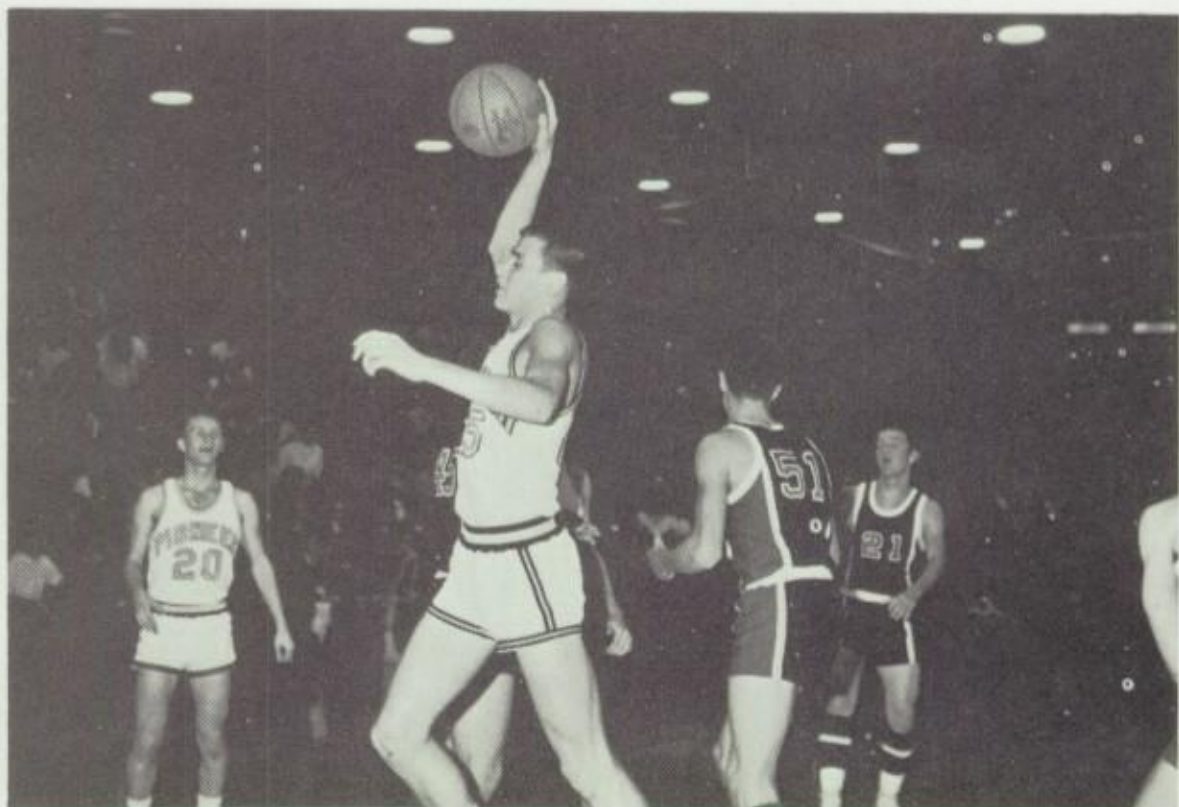

The defense may out-size McFatridge, but his Panther spirit always prevails.

The 1968-69 varsity basketball season was filled with many hectic and exciting moments. Out-sized almost every game, the Panthers had to rely on their aggressive defense and excellent team spirit. With the help of Coach Aldridge and arduous practice, the Panthers molded themselves into an outstanding team, and one very difficult to beat. Excellent team attitude plus a lot of hustle enabled the Panthers to achieve many of their goals. They were in contention for the Conference title the whole season, and with only three seniors graduating, chances are good for the Conference title next year.

Cindermen exhibit individual effort

Pioneer's "67-68" track team again showed their physical talents. Although they were handicapped with an inferior track and no home meets, they still upheld Pioneer's tradition of competition. With everyone contributing his efforts the track team again produced a very productive season. With only two seniors lost through graduation we all can anticipate another great season. The only disappointment in the season was the loss of Mr. Anderson, but we all can be sure Mr. Snider will do an equally good job. With the construction of a new rubberized track, the cindermen are even more hopeful about the upcoming season.

Last season's baseball team is one that Pioneer is very proud of. In the tough Midwest Conference the boys finished high and in the tri-county, Pioneer came out with an unblemished 8-0 record. The tri-county team proved Pioneer's urge to win. With many key seniors out of the lineup in the summer league, the "rookies" came on strong and more than filled the vacant positions. The desire of this team changed a rebuilding season into one of the best in Pioneer's history. The great thing of it is that most of these boys and Coach Aldridge will be back again to bring home some more trophies next year.

Linksmen fare with stiff competition

Last year's golf team featured many underclassmen who proved they could hold their own with many area golfers. With only two golfers graduating, Coach Williams is pretty optimistic about next season. Plagued with limited practice area, these boys had to go to Logansport every night to golf. Again these golfers represented our school well and we can all look forward to another sound golf team next year.

Although 1968-1969 was a grand finale to twelve years of study, it also became a prelude to better things for the graduating class of Pioneer High.

The beat of its footsteps shall no longer echo through the halls of Pioneer but a part of it shall remain in the memories of those to follow and those who came before.

Working with class officers, sponsors engineered a successful year. Sponsors were Mrs. Kendall, Mr. Hoffman, and Miss Shriner.

The freshman class was very ably led by their class officers. Treas.--Ronnie Blackman; Pres.--Steve Collins;

Sec.--Virginia Davis; V.P.--Jolene Jones. The experience of leadership should be very beneficial.

JUNIOR HIGH

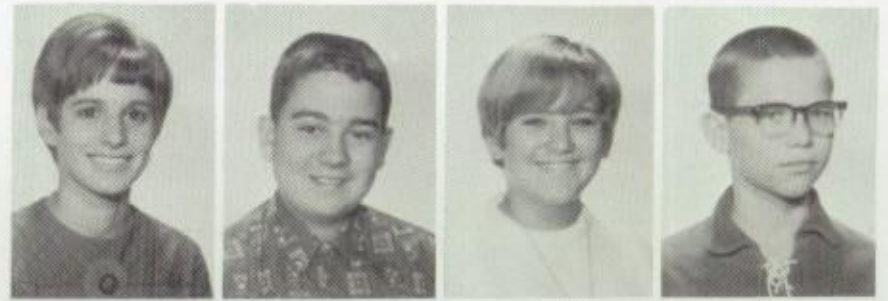

Junior high school years gave training in high school procedure and activities to seventh and eighth graders. They came to realize the true importance in getting a good education. But education is not the only valuable thing offered in junior high. Learning to live with all kinds of people and gaining experience in social activities were within the grasp of any junior high student who wished to broaden his horizons, become a well-rounded and responsible citizen, and develop school spirit.

Eighth graders eagerly anticipate high school

Even seventh graders suffer the dilemma of high school students--an overabundance of homework.

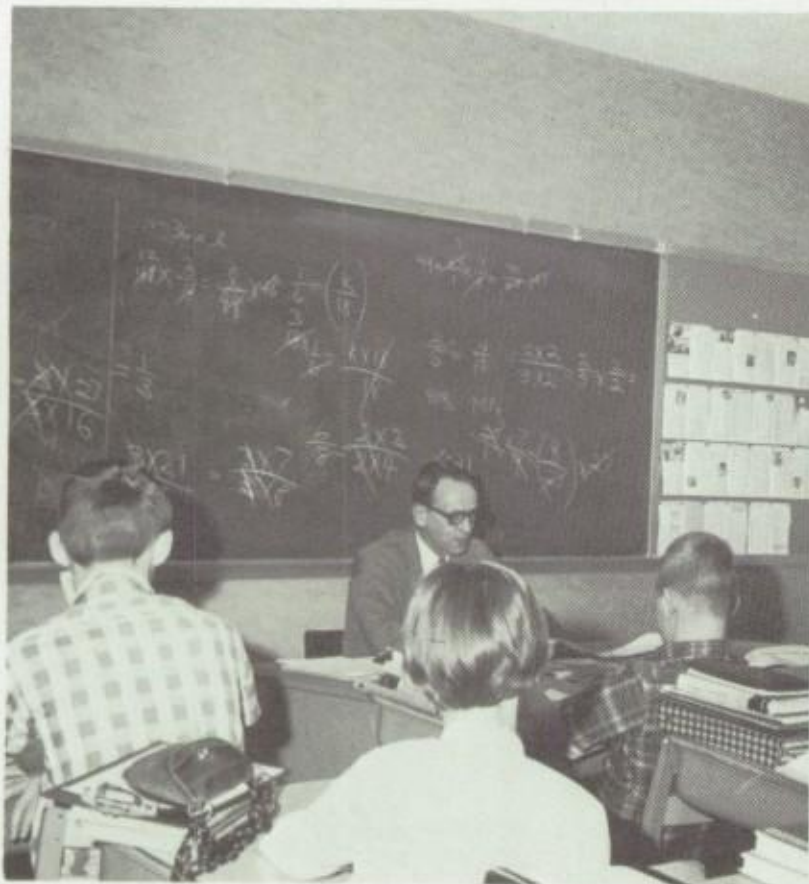

7th grade cheerleaders: Marilu Myers, Lisa Goodrich, Anita Luey, Jane Ferguson.

The seventh graders have yet one more year of junior high activities to look forward to. They will again be a part of basketball, cross country, chorus, and band. As the beat went on last year, so advanced the seventh graders in knowledge and skills, important now and for the future.

"It's funny how a teacher sometimes feels that he's the only one in the room!"

7th Basketball Team: Mr. Hamilton, Wood, Campbell, Henry, Hostetter, Collins, Farrer, Hartle, Harvey, Hook, Ashcraft, Webber, Fowler, Conn, Berry, Musall, Lewellyn, Melton, Clements, Hatch, Swisher, Cookerly, Tribbett, Goltry, Huddleston, Morphet (Dorton absent when picture was taken).

RR #1, Logansport

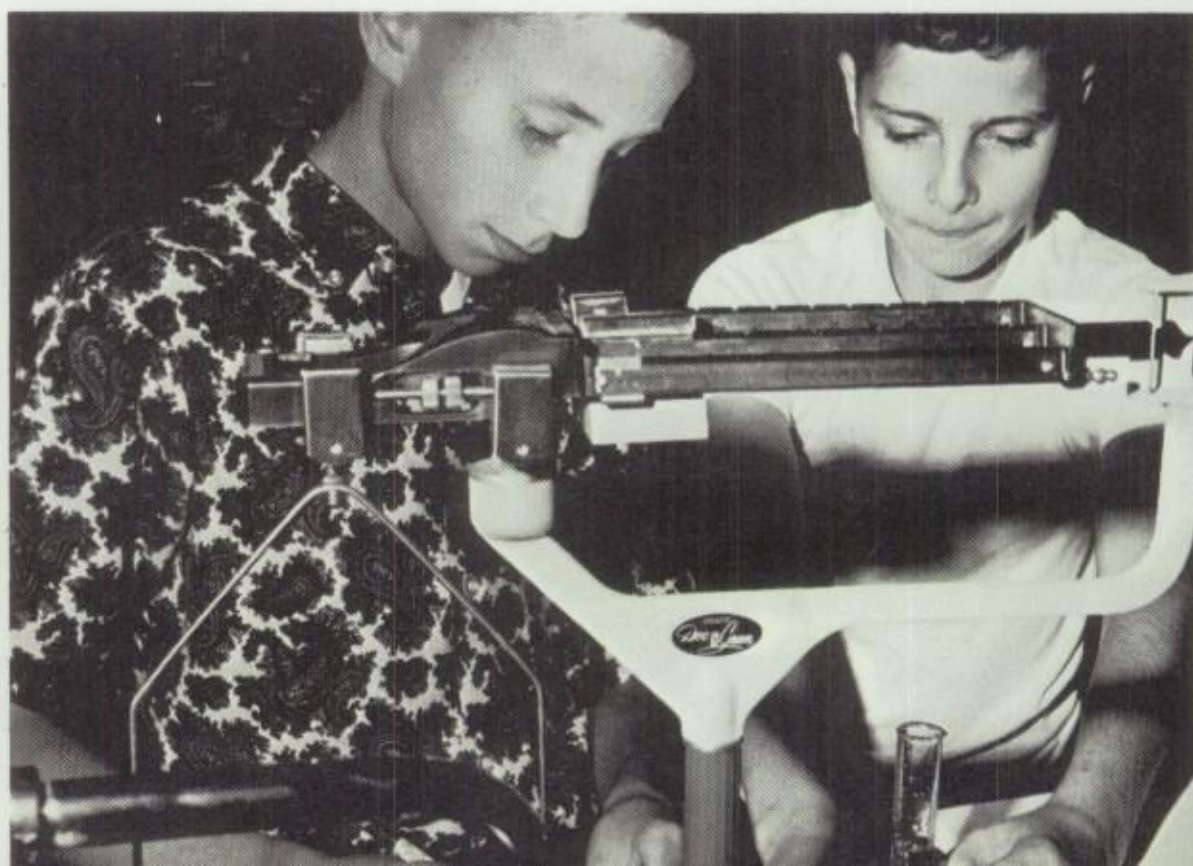

Outstanding in the activities of junior high students was their band and chorus. They were also involved in basketball and cross country, and sunbeam was continued through the year. Of course there were the usual and unusual classroom activities which helped make the year a successful and enjoyable one to remember.

Mr. Scott contemplates the band and choir schedule for 1968-1969.

Memories of school days at PHS shall long

Although all the activities, clubs, and teams are important aspects of Pioneer life, they would be meaningless without the individuals themselves. People are Pioneer, and Pioneer is people. These people represent various notes which merge to form a rhythm pattern, which in turn carries the beat; and the beat goes on . . . and on . . .

remain in the hearts of Pioneer students
